Shoppers' perception of availability of parking worries Provo merchants

By CRAIG SHIELDS
University Staff Writer

Local shoppers' perception about the availability of parking in the downtown area has some merchants worried.

"The problem is just that, a matter of perception," said Provo's mayor, James Ferguson.

According to a study done by Bartow & Associates in 1983, 24 percent of Provo residents do not take advantage of the many stores in Provo Town Square. The reason for this is people feel there is a problem finding parking spaces in the area.

But it is their truth to this perception?

There are some 860 public parking spaces within a one-block radius of Provo Town Square. Of those, only 6 percent of curb spaces, 67 percent of timed spaces and 54 percent of off-street spaces are being used, according to the study.

So why the problem?

Many believe that people want to find a parking stall next to the store they wish to shop in. People will park at a distance before they are through shopping, said Jerry Howell, director of community development. "But they don't want to walk when they shop downtown Provo."

"We need to better educate people on the availability of parking in Provo."

Suspect is arrested in escape attempt

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Darcy Perry's prison visits with inmate Ronnie Lee Gardner were ordered stopped only a few weeks before police arrested her on suspicion of having handed him a gun during a bloodless escape attempt at a downtown jail.

Perry, 34, was arrested an hour after Gardner, himself wounded by a guard's bullet, shot and killed an attorney and critically wounded a bailiff Tuesday morning at the Metropolitan Hall of Justice.

A week earlier, Perry was being ushered into the courthouse for a hearing on a prior murder charge. The woman fled when the shooting began, but not before leaving a change of men's clothing under a sink in the women's restroom, authorities said.

Perry, a strawberry-blond who sports a tattoo of a Harley-Davidson motorcycle across her back, has used a string of aliases. She is described by Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward as having "seen some hard miles" and with having a "boyfriend/girlfriend relationship" with Gardner.

Ironically, she was granted immunity for testimony against Gardner during a January preliminary hearing which resulted in Gardner's being bound over for trial on a first-degree murder charge.

Gardner, 23, is accused of shooting a bartender in the face during a robbery at a local tavern last October while he was an escapee from Utah State Prison.

Gardner was wounded in the shoulder by a corrections officer during Tuesday's shootout and was in fair condition Wednesday at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center. Three guards were posted inside his room and two outside.

Attorneys for Gardner, 35, died of a gunshot wound in the head shortly after the shooting. Bailiff George N. Kirk, 58, who was shot in the abdomen, was in serious condition at LDS Hospital.

Perry "visited him at the prison, but (officials) stopped that awhile back," Hayward said. "Her sister had been visiting him for the last few weeks."

Carmen Lucia Jolley was arrested on a petty larceny warrant at the same time as her sister, and both participated in a police lineup Wednesday morning related to the courthouse shootings, the sheriff said.

Perry, who also is known as Darcy Jolley, refused to cooperate with detectives who questioned about the escape attempt.

"She wouldn't tell us a thing," he said. "All she said was she didn't know anything about it. She said she was home with her children."

Hayward said Perry is the mother of two children and has four prior arrests, the last being in 1978, but he refused to elaborate.

The sisters were picked up at the same house, about a mile from the courtroom, where authorities arrested Gardner 23 days after the bartender's murder.

Jeffrey Galli, deputy warden at the prison, said visitor records had been taken to the Salt Lake County attorney's office.

Angry South Africans strike out against black township leaders

Mobs can't reach 'whitey,' so councilors become prey

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Blacks angered by white rule are striking out against the nearest symbols of the country's government, the black councilors and policemen in the increasingly turbulent black townships.

The black surrogates for the country's white leaders have become easy targets for black mobs unable to challenge directly an overwhelmingly powerful government and police force.

Black crowds burn the homes of black councilors and policemen and pelt the streets for "collaborators." In some cases they have hacked and burned to death those working within the system.

"In our situation, whitey is so beautifully, so effectively insulated from black anger that blacks have resorted to attacking black mobs unable to challenge directly an overwhelmingly powerful government and police force."

"In our situation, whitey is so beautifully, so effectively insulated from black anger that blacks have resorted to attacking black mobs unable to challenge directly an overwhelmingly powerful government and police force."

"Therefore black people will vent their anger on those they consider puppets of the system," Motlana added.

Most blacks slain in rioting in recent months have been killed by police and by other blacks. According to the South African Institute of Race Relations, 26 blacks have been slain by other blacks so far this year, while 71 have died in clashes with police using live ammunition, buckshot and tear gas.

The government-run broadcasting system and pro-government newspapers have emphasized the black-against-black bloodshed. Dr. Vederland, an anti-apartheid newspaper, recently showed on the charred remains of murdered victims in a display of "barbarism in its cruelest form," and that persons guilty of such acts "belong in the jungle."

But Motlana said the government and its supporters had "latched on like a man grabbing a life belt after his boat has sunk, grabbing onto this thing of black-on-black violence to detract attention from the major issues, particularly police brutality in Langa," Motlana said.

Nineteen people were killed March 21 when police and thousands of black marchers approached two parked police riot vehicles in the black township of Langa near Uitenhage in eastern Cape province.

"I feel quite disgusted that so much attention should be focused on this sideline," he added. "As long as oppression and exploitation and brutality continue, our people are going to continue to kill those who are part of the system. There's nothing else."

Most black targets of violence are members of government-backed black town councils and, less often, black policemen. The councils were created in late 1983 to replace virtually powerless community councils. They were given increased authority over rents and other financial matters but little additional power.

The new bodies were widely rejected in elections with voter turnout holding down overall turnout to 21 percent and less in large city townships. Soweto, Johannesburg's mammoth township, had a turnout of 10.7 percent after boycotters called the council an attempt to impose second-class local government without any national vote at all for the country's 22 million blacks.

When rioting erupted last September in the Vaal area south of Johannesburg, four members of the black town council were hacked to death by mobs incensed by rent hikes. Dozens more blacks were killed in clashes with police. That set the tone for the month of unrest that followed.

Two days after police shot the marchers in Langa, the only member of the township council who

Leaders seek spending cuts But can't reach compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations for the White House and Senate Republican leaders struggled Wednesday to complete agreement on a multi-billion dollar package of spending cuts to reduce federal deficits, but said differences remained over Social Security, defense and education in education programs, including student loans.

Sources close to the negotiations added that while no final decisions had been made, there was an "inclination" to accept Reagan's recommendation to eliminate the federal subsidy for Amtrak, most Small Business Administration functions and the Urban Development Action Grant program.

On the other hand, the sources said Reagan's proposal to end grants for mass transit was likely to be rejected if a reduction in funding.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said any deficit-reduction plan would be brought to Reagan for his review, but added, "I would anticipate that the president would give a nod very quickly." He said there was a "good chance" that could take place before the president's scheduled departure for a California vacation Friday.

But after reaching tentative agreement on a $14 billion, three-year package of farm programs due Tuesday, sources said negotiators at a preliminary morning session quickly ran into difficulty when some senators objected to Reagan's call for sharp reductions in education programs, including student loans.

Jeane Kirkpatrick makes the switch; joins Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, saying she is "tired of swimming against the current of my own party," announced her voter registration Wednesday from Democrat to Republican.

Hours after her new voter registration card was delivered to election officials in suburban Montgomery County, Md., Kirkpatrick told a news conference that she still admires her Democratic heroes of the past.

"If Harry Truman were running for president today, I would vote for him," she said, adding that her first vote was cast for Truman in 1948. She said her next vote was for Adlai Stevenson, the Democratic presidential nominee who lost to Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952.

Kirkpatrick's long-harbored switch of party allegiance came after she served four years as the Reagan administration's chief representative to the United Nations and developed a reputation as an outspoken conservative on foreign policy issues, who frequently disagreed with the State Department position.

Republicans marked the occasion with a reception in her honor, and she was joined at the news conference by Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter, and Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr., chairman of the Republican National Committee.

"We are very thrilled," said Reagan, chairwoman of the GOP Women's Political Action League.

"I can think of no greater pleasure to me," added Fahrenkopf.

During her U.N. career, Kirkpatrick had well-publicized disagreements with then-Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr. over policy in Latin America and has been described by aides to his successor, George P. Shultz, as opposing attempts to improve relations with the Soviet Union.

She became a favorite of conservatives who hoped that Reagan would name her secretary of state or national security adviser when she announced she was leaving her U.N. post. But no such offer was made and Kirkpatrick is resuming her former career as a writer and lecturer associated with Georgetown University.

had not yet resigned was one of five people hacked and burned to death by crowds. T. B. Kinikili, an undertaker, and his son, also killed by the mob, were accused by residents of turning over youths to police and even of shooting several youths.

"It was Kinikili against the community," You said. "He was the best man in town," said Emson Banda, chairman of the Uitenhage Parents Committee, one of hundreds of community groups set up as rivals to the official councils.

"We didn't regard the council as part of the black community; we regarded them as part of the oppressors," Banda said.

"They are dead now," Banda said of Kinikili and his son, "and the town is quiet. The ones who were responsible for police, shooting and firing teargas everywhere."

The homes of nearly two dozen policemen were also set afire and destroyed. That weekend, the home of Soweto Mayor Edward Kinene was damaged by a grenade, and the township mayor in rural Welkom was stoned by mobs. Similar attacks have occurred in townships around the country in recent months.

Malcolm X, a well-known member of the Cape provincial council for the opposition Progressive Federal Party, said some blacks had joined the council "for the best of motives, as a stepping stone toward full participation for blacks."

But others sought power, and those were suspected of widespread corruption, she added. Residents accused councilors of exacting money from their homes and extorting money for residence permits, which were issued by vigilante groups created by council members.

Motlana said the government's three-month-long ban, imposed last week, on meetings of rival community groups in riot-torn areas will only increase violence against black puppets.

Logan couple dies from poisoning

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — A young Logan couple apparently died of accidental carbon monoxide poisoning after taking a hot barbecue grill into their bedroom to keep warm, police say.

Logan Police Chief Ferris Groll Wednesday identified the victims as Rubin Ponca Lopez, 20, and JoAnne Arguello, 18, both originally from Dayton, Ore.

He said the two had moved to Logan last October.

Groll said the bodies of the couple were found in the bedroom of their apartment Tuesday afternoon after a friend became concerned about their whereabouts.

The chief said Jamie Santana told police he had been at the Lopez residence Sunday night where a group cooked hamburgers outside on the grill and then went inside to eat.

Groll said Santana told police the couple said they might turn the grill inside to keep warm because their gas had been turned off. Santana said he had advised against that.

Larry Niederhauser, Logan area manager for Mountain Fuel Supply Co., said a utility investigation showed the couple had requested their gas be shut off due to finances.

No one answered the door when Santana came by Monday to pick up Lopez for work.

Senate throws out unemployment bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday rejected 58-34 legislation that would have extended federal jobless benefits for six months as it prepared to consider a bill to phase out the program for $339,000 unemployed.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said he was "fairly certain" President Reagan would sign the $160 million phase-out bill as long as it contained no amendments to extend the program.

The phase-out bill, approved in the House on Tuesday, was to go immediately to the White House for Reagan's signature pending Senate approval.

The defeated legislation was in the form of an amendment proposed by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa. He said what was necessary to "protect unemployed workers throughout the country who through no fault of their own can't find work."

But Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Packwood, R-Ore., urged defeat of the amendment, saying it would only "ensure that the president would veto the phase-out plan."

Before taking up the phase-out bill, the Senate was to consider another amendment that would make it easier for states with high unemployment to offer jobless benefits for longer than 26 weeks.

The Federal Supplemental Compensation Program provides up to 14 weeks of payments to jobless workers who have exhausted their 26 weeks of state benefits.

Sudan rejects offer of unity with Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sudanese President Gaafar Nimeiri said in an interview published Wednesday that he rejected an offer by Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy of $5 billion for the Sudan if Nimeiri would sign a unity agreement with Libya.

In the interview in The Washington

Post, Nimeiri said the Libyan offer came during talks the Sudanese and Libyans had in Paris held with a Khadafy envoy several months ago.

Khadafy had worked out a similar unity agreement with Morocco last September.

"We refused and we stopped talking with him (Khadafy)," the newspaper quoted Nimeiri as saying.

Nimeiri said he thought Khadafy was trying to get his side of the economically handicapped Sudan to make contact with the opposition there and to isolate Sudan from Egypt, which has an economic integration agreement with the Sudan.

Nimeiri said the Paris meeting with Khadafy's envoy "was not a new 10th time" and was "the 12th time," it had happened.

Israeli army frees over 750 prisoners

ANSAR, Lebanon (AP) — The Israeli army freed more than 750 prisoners in southern Lebanon on Wednesday and many of the released men chanted "Khomeini, Khomeini" and shouted defiance of the Israeli occupation.

With its withdrawal from Lebanon only weeks away, the Israelis closed the Ansar prison camp, freed the prisoners and sent a fleet of trucks to dismantle other military positions.

The prisoners — many of them Shiite Moslems who espouse the teachings of Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini — chanted "God is Great" and "Death to Khomeini" as they sat in Israeli army trucks that took them from Ansar to the Lebanese villages where they were freed.

Some had their hands tied in front of them with strips of white plastic, but the rest clapped and made V for victory signs with their fingers.

"We love Khomeini. He knows everything," a 20-year-old Shiite said. "The young people identified himself only as Ahiad, a Arabic word that means 'Holy war.'

On Tuesday the Israelis took 1,100 other Ansar prisoners to a new detention center in Israel. The release of about a third of the prisoners was designed to ease tensions with southern Lebanon's increasingly hostile Shiite Moslems.

About 20 staffers of the International Red Cross monitored the release. Michel Cagneaux, head of the relief agency's Tel Aviv office, said the unofficial count showed 758 prisoners were released.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin had indicated that release of the other prisoners would be linked to an end to the guerrilla warfare that has claimed the lives of 40 Israeli soldiers so far this year.

The Israelis conducted another of their "iron fist" raids on Shiite villages suspected of harboring guerrillas.

Ohio bankers look for in-state offer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio bankers fearing a deadline for matching an out-of-state offer to buy the closed Home State Savings Bank met privately with state banking officials Wednesday, hinting afterward that an Ohio institution might make a counteroffer.

Ron Bolen, executive vice president of the Ohio Bankers Association, said the bankers were briefed in general terms about an offer from an out-of-state institution — reportedly Chemical Bank of New York — and that the Ohio bankers "are now on their own."

'86 budget would eliminate or reduce significant federal aid to urban areas

An analysis by the U.S. Conference of Mayors of the federal budget for fiscal year 1986 indicates the budget "proposes to eliminate or sharply reduce nearly every federal urban program of significant benefit to cities."

The analysis said, "The budget proposal contains significant increases in defense spending on one hand and significant decreases in domestic spending on the other." Grants to states and localities would drop by 18 percent — $20 billion.

Some of the most significant reductions will be in public transit, assisted housing, health services and city revenues.

According to the analysis, the proposed budget calls for a two-thirds reduction in transit assistance, including a total elimination of federal operating assistance and a rise in the local matching fare required by federal government.

Among other cuts, the survey sent out by the conference, 89 percent said fares will increase, and 70 percent of those cities said fares will double. Also, three out of four cities would reduce their vehicle fleets, and 70 percent would eliminate some public transit routes. Thirty-nine percent said their transit systems may face complete shutdowns.

A moratorium on all new units of assisted housing is proposed in the new budget. More than 88

Man charged with taking second graders hostage

DETROIT (AP) — A 19-year-old man who allegedly held three second graders hostage at their classroom after telling their teacher, "I need help," was arraigned Wednesday on kidnapping charges and ordered to undergo psychiatric tests.

Alvin Sanders of Hamtramck stood mute as the charges were read, and an innocent plea was entered for him by District Judge Daphne Means Curtis. He had surrendered at the Detroit school Tuesday afternoon.

Sanders was charged with three counts of kidnapping and one count of extortion and use of a firearm during a felony.

Assistant Wayne County Prosecutor Timothy Kenny asked for a $250,000 cash bond, but Curtis set bond at $100,000 and said Sanders must undergo a psychiatric examination and would have an attorney appointed for him.

After answering the judge's questions in a clear but low voice, Sanders left the courtroom in the custody of sheriff's deputies. A preliminary hearing was set for April 15.

Authorities say Sanders took hostages — two 9-year-old boys and a 7-year-old girl — in a classroom at William C. Loving Elementary School.

percent of cities responding to the survey said the availability of housing for low income people would be either adversely or very adversely affected.

The study showed that for 98 percent of the cities, the availability of decent housing would lengthen because of the moratorium.

The administration's proposal to cut the Medicaid program will reduce locally available health services or the number of people who receive health care in 70 percent of the cities responding. In almost all of these cities, both services and people served would be cut.

The study said the proposal to freeze health block grants and to end the existing family planning programs would trigger an increase in sexually transmitted diseases in 66 percent of the cities. Childhood disease rates would be expected to increase in 64 percent of the cities. Infant mortality rates would increase in 62 percent of the cities, and tuberculosis rates would increase in 60 percent of the cities.

PROTECTION PLAN

Every parent should have a protection plan for their new baby — like having their child securely guarded from accidents in an infant car seat whenever they ride in automobiles. The chance of death is greatly reduced when an infant is securely guarded by an infant car seat. Besides, it's the law.

Because they want to be part of that protection plan, the three non-profit Intermountain Health Care Hospitals of Utah County have joined together to provide a way for infants to leave the hospital in a life-protecting car seat. When you have a baby at any of the three hospitals, if you pay your bill, or the portion not covered by insurance at or before admission, you'll be given your own infant car seat to keep. It's that simple!

We care about the health of your baby. Call us for additional information.

First Presidency offers message of world peace

War, hunger, family strife, despair and sorrow could be remedied if the world would turn to the example of the Church, the First Presidency of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints said in its Easter message for 1985.

The message, issued from President Spencer W. Kimball, leader of the LDS Church, and his counselors, presidents Marion G. Romney and Gordon B. Hinckley, said, "We rejoice this Easter season at the resurrection of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, and the promise of an everlasting life He has given to all mankind."

"Just as the earth blossoms anew each spring after the death of winter, so the Savior of the world, through his great atoning sacrifice, assured us new life after our earthly death."

"We encourage men and women throughout the world to contemplate the life and example of the Savior, to incorporate His teachings into their lives and to teach their families about Him. Within His teachings and His life, lie the answers to every problem which confronts humankind."

"War, hunger, family strife, despair, and sorrow could be remedied if the world would turn to His example. Only as we look to the Prince of Peace will we find true peace as individuals, as families, and as members of the world community."

"We testify that Jesus the Christ is indeed the Son of God, the Savior of mankind. It is our prayer that His teachings and life will bring peace to a troubled world."

Some traditions just fade, but 'Y' stays white, bright

By PAUL GAPPMEYER
University Staff Writer

Traditions come and go, but one tradition that has not faded is the "Y" that overlooks the BYU campus and has an interesting history of its own.

In 1906 proposals were first made for a letter to represent the university, said Jim Bown, a graduate student from Gunnison, Utah, and the president of Intercollegiate Knights. The administration proposed the letter as a peacemaker between the junior and senior classes.

"In 1906 the junior class of 1907 put their graduation date on the slopes of the mountain. The senior class of that year became annoyed and began cutting off the waist-length hair of the junior class girls. Many fist fights had been fought before the block could restore order," Bown said.

The first proposal was to put the three initials "BYU" on the mountain. This was yielded by a counterproposal to put in just the letter "Y" which gradually emerged into the block "Y" we have become familiar with today, he said.

E.P. Partridge, a professor in the College of Engineering, and Harvey Fletcher, a professor of mathematics, surveyed a site that was 2,000 feet above the city. Later that year ground was broken, brush was cleared and rocks were arranged as a frame for the new project. In May of that year some loyal BYU students first climbed up the trail and painted the first in former years, "male students who did not participate in whitewashing the 'Y' were captured and punished. . . . Their hair was cut and an iodine 'Y' was painted from their foreheads to the top of their noses."

Bown said, "I think the participants were thrown into the baton ponds."

Whitewashing duties were changed in the 60s and 70s. The freshman class took over the whitewashing as part of orientation activities, he said.

This was discontinued in 1979 when the Intercollegiate Knights, a campus organization that takes care of and protects the "Y," organized and painted a synthetic cement-type material, which bonded the blocks together to prevent erosion and eliminated the need for whitewashing.

The practice was also discontinued because the Forest Service was concerned about the erosion that was being caused by the massive amounts of people on the mountain, Bown said.

The Intercollegiate Knights have been protectors and keepers of the "Y" for more than 60 years, he said.

They traditionally light the "Y" every year during Homecoming festivities, the first weekend of March for the "Mormon Art Ball" and for graduation.

In 1984 BYU students witnessed the "Y" change to a blue color during the Homecoming activities and saw the addition of a No. 1 when BYU took first place in the football polls.

"While the lighting of the 'Y' dates back to 1923, the tradition retains its beauty because it is an expression of the spirit of BYU," Bown said.

FAA will propose plan to stiffen requirements on airline seats, floors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration plans to propose requirements next summer for stronger aircraft seats, giving passengers a better chance to survive an airline crash, the agency's chief says.

But FAA Administrator Donald Engen, disclosing the plan to a congressional subcommittee Tuesday, said the standard would apply only to new planes because it would be impractical to retrofit the current fleet of 2,300 commercial jetliners.

Engen said such conversions would require floors and other anchors of the planes to be strengthened as well.

He commented during a hearing by the House Science and Technology aviation subcommittee concerning results of a controlled crash-impact test conducted at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., last Dec. 1.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., subcommittee chairman, noted that the National Transportation

Court finds physician not guilty of malpractice in birth complications

A Provo physician was found not guilty of medical malpractice charges Friday in Fourth District Court.

Howard R. Francis, doctor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Provo Obstetrics and Gynecology Clinic, Inc., was found not guilty of charges filed in the 1979 suit by Barbara O. Chapman, 35, of Orem, which stemmed from complications she experienced after the December, 1977 birth of her third child.

Francis experienced hemorrhaging as a result of a retained placenta following the birth that was stopped by emergency surgery. The necessary surgery resulted in scarring, making the plaintiff temporarily unable to have children. The suit charged that negligent treatment given to Chapman during her pregnancy and the weeks and months after the birth impaired her ability to bear children.

The verdict was presented to Judge David Sam Friday night by a seven-woman, one-man jury ruling that neither Francis nor the clinic were negligent in the care or treatment of Chapman.

SLC council appoints Palmer DePaulis mayor

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Salt Lake City Council has granted outgoing Mayor Ted Wilson's request to nominate Palmer DePaulis to replace the state's highest-ranking Democrat when Wilson resigns in July.

The council unanimously voted Tuesday night to designate DePaulis, 40, also a Democrat and current director of the city's Public Works Department, as interim mayor until municipal elections are held in November.

DePaulis, who last week announced he would resign effective July 1 after 10 years in office to take the helm of the University of Utah's Hinckley Institute of Politics.

Use of personal computers has increased tenfold at Y

By TOD SANDERS
Senior Reporter

The computer age arrived at BYU long ago, but the impact computers are having on campus, especially personal computers, among students and staff is growing as never before.

According to Jim Logan, computer user specialist for the BYU Computer Facilities Department, the use of personal computers in general has increased dramatically in the last five years.

"It would be a very safe estimate to say that the total computing power at BYU has gone up more than 10 times in the last five years," he said.

Almost every office on campus is equipped with a personal computer. Many students are purchasing PCs, especially the Apple company's Macintosh.

Jim Egget, of the computer services department, estimates the Macintosh has been sold to more than 3,000 students, staff and deans.

According to Logan, BYU gets special discounts on the Apple computer because it is part of a consortium of 24 universities that Apple has chosen to "enhance the exchange of information and software." Other members of the consortium include Stanford, Notre Dame and all of the Ivy League schools.

"The good price discount that Apple gives the members of the consortium is the benefit that is of real interest to students," Logan said.

"A lot of students are not aware of the discount they can get," Egget said. "Any full-time student can buy one, but they must commit that they won't sell it off campus. In fact, they must sell it back to the university if they want to sell it."

A new benefit for BYU is being a member of the consortium is being able to use a state-of-the-art laser printer that Apple recently produced.

"It can do things that could not be done before at a comparable price, and its integration of graphics is almost of typeset quality," Logan said. "BYU only has one laser printer, and it is a pre-production version. We have ordered some for departmental use, but if students and members of departments want to come in now and find out more about it, they can come to the Computer Consultation Center."

Egget, who acts as the technical contact representative for BYU with the Apple corporation, said the advantages of being a member of the consortium are good for both the universities and Apple.

"One of the advantages of being in the consortium is that we are in contact with the other universities to see what they are doing with computing in general and especially with the Macintosh," he said. "The main benefit to Apple is that the universities are developing new software."

"One of the benefits of multiple computers also benefit one another because the exchange programs which the universities have developed for the public domain (programs that can be copied by the public legally)."

Egget said BYU has approximately 50 public domain diskettes available for copying at the Computer Consultation Center, located in 197 TMCB. He said most of them have come from the consortium.

Egget said the Macintosh is revolutionizing the world of personal computers.

"Students can do things on this computer, such as integration of word processing and graphics, that they used to not be able to do at all, unless it was with glue and scissors."

"You don't need to know any commands with it," Logan said. "It breaks down barriers that have existed between people."

For PC owners, the Computer Consultation Center has a three-fold purpose for assisting PC users, according to Calvin Lindsay, an employee at the center.

"We try and help people through consultation, demonstration and public domain," he said. "By helping I mean consulting with students and faculty on problems they are having with their Macintosh and IBM PC software, and letting them try out new programs."

Lindsay said students can come in and try out the computers.

In addition to the consultation center, mini-computers are available in the copy center of the mini-computer lab to demonstrate the strengths of the Macintosh and the IBM PC. There are also Apple and IBM user groups on campus, Logan said.

According to Egget, public domain software is available for copying in many places.

"Probably the main network for copying programs is CompuServe," he said. "With any public access network like CompuServe, all you have to do is hook up to a phone to a computer and call the network to copy the program."

If the computer owner thinks he does not have to worry about buying software because of the amount available through the public domain, he is mistaken, Egget said.

Another big issue in the personal computer field is the illegal copying or "pirating" of software.

Egget and Logan are both of the opinion that piracy of software done by BYU students.

"I don't have a lot of data evidence, but I am pretty sure it is going on," Egget said. "I see students with a lot of software, and I question if they got it in a legal way. Often they don't have documentation for it, and that is a pretty sure sign that they have pirated it."

Logan added, "Students are opening themselves up to a problem. We piracy, etc. It doesn't name the university look too good either."

As far as staff and faculty go, Egget said the BYU administration has made it "very clear" that employees are not to pirate software.

Photographs of missing children to be mailed with gas bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Photographs of missing children will be mailed with gas utility bills to homes across America starting next month in a National Child Watch Campaign, government and private officials said Wednesday.

Gas utilities in 42 states serving 32 million customers have committed themselves to the program, said George Lawrence, president of the American Gas Association.

"We'll be urging all utilities and community-based industries to participate in the campaign at a news conference."

"Utilities are uniquely positioned to reach everyone home in America."

Under the new program, a joint effort of the National Child Safety Council and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, the center will pick two photographs to circulate each month with gas bills.

Temporary principal appointed in Alpine

The Alpine School District has found a temporary replacement for ousted American Fork High School principal Wayne Reid, district officials said Wednesday.

Roy Pehrson, formerly one of two assistant principals to Reid, has been appointed by the school board as acting principal until the district's remainder of the 1984-85 school year, said Michael Robinson, public relations spokesman for the district.

The school board voted unanimously not to renew Reid's contract last week after a marathon two-day public hearing, which was requested by Reid. "Expectations of permanent replacement have been met," said the hearing committee chairwoman.

Reid, who has taken another position working at the district's central office with ad hoc assignments until his contract expires in June, conceded that such drastic action on the part of the board was unwarranted. "If you have violated that (the rules), a reprimand should be issued, but not termination," Reid told the board during the hearing.

He portrayed his situation as that of an out-of-town principal brought into the district with specific assignments. "Whenver you come into an area and bring in new ideas, people who are in a rut are forced to change them," he said.

Pehrson, who has been at AHS for 18 years as a teacher and two as vice principal, asked for cooperation and understanding from parents, staff and students in his new assignment. "We just want to pull together and finish a good year," he said.

The district is currently accepting applications for the position of principal at American Fork High School.

Schroeder prepared for hospital release

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Artificial heart recipient William Schroeder will be released Saturday from the Louisville hospital where he has lived since his Nov. 25 implant, a Humana Inc. spokesman said Wednesday.

The Japanese man, who will ride in his customized van at 2 p.m. from Humana Hospital to a transitional apartment across the street, said Robert Irvine, Humana Inc. director of public relations.

The decision was made by implant surgeon William C. DeVries, Irvine said.

"Dr. DeVries indicated Wednesday that William Schroeder will be discharged from Humana Hospital Sunday on Saturday, April 6," Irvine said.

Schroeder, 53, and his wife, Margaret, will move to the apartment which Humana has renovated for artificial heart patients, he said.

The apartment complex, across from the hospital, has been specially equipped for such patients.

Schroeder, who became the second person ever to receive a permanent Jarvik-7 heart, has lived longer than anyone with the plastic and metal device.

On March 16, he completed his 112th day on the heart, equaling the time of Barney Clark, the first implant recipient, who died in 1983.

Originally, doctors had planned to release Schroeder on Feb. 14, his birthday, but scrapped that plan because of a persistent fever and flu-like symptoms.

His shrinking appetite forced doctors to tube him liquids to supplement his diet.

But Schroeder began regaining his strength and resumed his wheelchair rides around the hospital and also took several brief trips around the city in his van.

People are assets in business

Educator refers to them as 'the soul of the organization'

By BECKY ELGAAREN
University Staff Writer

People must be treated as permanent assets in a business, said A. Wiggenhorn, director of the Motorola Training and Education Center in Illinois, in the opening speech of the Human Resource Development conference Wednesday night.

Wiggenhorn, director of the Motorola Training and Education Center in Illinois, said understanding the role of the professional in bringing about corporate excellence in HRD depends on several areas.

"The first must is understanding the fact that people are the soul of the company, you must realize that they are the soul of the organization. The soul speaks of the companies values," he said.

"Today, as we become institutionalized in the business world, we often lose those values." Not many men today would continue working without pay for six months because that's what they were right, said Wiggenhorn.

Another necessity is being a believer in passing on myths. He said, "If nothing else it is a good thing to tell the salesmen that there is a reason for what you are doing."

There is a variety of skills and knowledge involved in HRD work. Wiggenhorn said one of HRD's greatest tasks is to understand technology and then help the managers understand technology.

Communication is also important. "One of our failures," he said, "has been that we never speak in the language of our managers. You must learn the language of the people you work for."

Circumstances to look for in today's work field are fewer levels of management, a lot of part-time employees and program or project-oriented training, he said.

"The development of people is just as important as the companies they work for. This requires management training and training of the employees. The design model is to not train people in what they need for 30 years. Train them for what they need for the first six months, then train them again and again," he said.

Attributes HRD workers must possess, said Wiggenhorn, include general skills, communication, listening skills, how to get along, enough projects started and character to not sell short skills and communication abilities. "I am convinced that people who understand training understand communication," he said.

Wiggenhorn admonished individuals to look at the resources available. "Look at future employee publications, ask to participate, talk to employees, and look how sophisticated or unsophisticated the company is," he said.

A. William Wiggenhorn speaks during the Human Resource Development conference Wednesday night. He is the director of the Motorola Training and Education Center in Illinois.

Survival hopes dim for heart donee

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An Indiana teenager has received a new heart after five days on a pair of external plastic pumps, but doctors said Wednesday he has only a slim chance of surviving unless his kidneys start working soon.

Michael C. Jones, 16, also has a higher risk of infection because of openings made in his skin for the pumps and dialysis machine, his surgeon said Wednesday.

"If we can get his kidneys back, I think we can save him," Dr. Laman Gray Jr. said at a news conference. "If not, there's no way."

The doctor said he thought there was about an 80 percent or 90 percent chance that Jones' kidneys would resume functioning.

The heart recipient was still "critically ill," said Gray, who placed Jones' chance of survival at 20 to 25 percent.

Jones received his new heart during surgery Tuesday night at Jewish Hospital. In the operation, the boy's diseased heart and the plastic pumps that kept it beating were removed and the donor heart transplanted.

Doctors began looking for a new heart for Jones the day after the ventricular assist devices (VADs) were attached, but an organ was not readily found.

Gray said the heart transplanted into Jones was "slightly larger than what would be ideal," but because of the difficulty in finding an organ, surgeons went ahead with the transplant.

The hospital would not release any information about the heart's donor at the donor family's request and to prevent jeopardizing future donations.

Two of the VADs, which provide blood flow from the body to the heart, were attached to Jones Thursday, more than a week after an unidentified virus attacked his heart. The virus caused five cardiac arrests before doctors could attach the VADs.

Gray said he was criticized for trying the experimental procedure on Jones. "Some were afraid he was too far gone" and not a good candidate for the surgery, the doctor said. As it turned out, the temporary pumps "really saved his life and sustained him," the surgeon said.

3 cars in Provo burglarized; total of 17 since March 27

Provo was hit with three auto burglaries. That brings the total to 17 auto burglaries since March 27, according to police reports.

Police said a car parked in the parking lot of Provo's Fox Theater was broken into early Tuesday night while the car owner was in the theater. Suspects got away with $250 worth of personal property including a camera and a backpack containing cash and supplies, a police spokesman said.

According to reports, the car had been left locked, but when the victim returned he found both doors unlocked and one left ajar. Approximately $100 worth of damage was done to the car, according to reports.

Nearly $1,000 worth of damage occurred when suspects smashed the front windows of two cars parked at 50 E. 100 North, said police.

An additional $100 in damages to the interior of one of the cars was also reported. A $300 radar detector and a $50 hood ornament were reported stolen from the other vehicle, police said.

Students get careless as end gains ground; theft, pranks multiply

Pranked, said Lemmon. An engraver can be checked out in B-6 ASB. "Write your name in your books in several places," he said.

"To help eliminate pranks, he said, "Keep curtains closed after dark and avoid giving personal information over the telephone until you know who is calling."

"As students prepare to move from their apartments, they need to make sure valuables are not left unattended," he said. "It is an inconvenience when only one individual is transporting items from an apartment to a car, but leaving them unattended invites theft," he said.

To prevent theft, University Police encourages students to secure valuable belongings and not leave belongings unattended in restrooms, study areas, cafeterias, locker rooms, etc.

"Lock it or lose it. Lock your apartment door and windows; your car and your bicycle." The best lock is worthless, "not used," said Arnold Lemmon, crime prevention specialist with University Police.

People who own bicycles should have them registered to help officials identify the bike and owner. A cable or chain lock should be used to secure both the frame and the wheel to the bike rack, said Lemmon.

Belongings should be marked or engraved, said Lemmon. An engraver can be checked out in B-6 ASB. "Write your name in your books in several places," he said.

"To help eliminate pranks, he said, "Keep curtains closed after dark and avoid giving personal information over the telephone until you know who is calling."

"As students prepare to move from their apartments, they need to make sure valuables are not left unattended," he said. "It is an inconvenience when only one individual is transporting items from an apartment to a car, but leaving them unattended invites theft," he said.

"The majority of problems in housing areas are that students present the opportunity for theft," said Donna Hoover, manager of Heritage Halls.

A good place to keep a bicycle is one where the resident is on the same floor but has just stepped out. It takes approximately eight seconds to walk into a room and steal an item. "Lock your door and keep valuables hidden," she said.

University Police work closely with housing officials, library circulation, the BYU Bookstore and other campus departments.

Computer-teacher program works

By SHERRI SPRUANCE
University Staff Writer

After his first semester teaching Computer Science 103, professor "Elrond" has been declared a success. The Elrond project, a method of teaching computer science by teaching all sections of the course per fall.

BYU professors Larry Christensen and Gordon Stokes developed the program of computer teaching to cope with an increased enrollment in beginning computer classes. In the program's trial run this semester, half of the students in the 103 classes were taught by the computer, and the other half were taught by regular classroom instruction.

"Students seem to really like the program after spending an entire semester working with it," Stokes said. However, all the lessons were not completed on the computer, and the students spent the last four weeks with an instructor.

Stokes' son Gary, a graduate student in computer science, is the instructor for all three sections of the class. He said the only complaints he heard were few.

Because of the success of the class, it will be taught entirely by computer next fall. Only one section of the class will be offered, but after the orientation, students will be free to work at whatever time is convenient for them.

Gordon Stokes said if funding could be obtained from the university or an interested corporation, more computer instructed classes would be developed for the Computer Science Department. However, creating new classes is an expensive project, since each course costs approximately $100,000 to develop.

"It is not something you can approach casually," he said.

Computer Science 103 is a beginning computer programming class. Gary Stokes said about 80 to 85 percent of his students had never used a computer before taking the class but wanted to learn the basics. The class is designed to remove the fear and mystery of computers.

A final computer program project is required from every student. Some students make programs in their major, and others are for their own personal use.

Many students do their last minute studying as they wait in line to take tests. Because of the expected increase in usage during finals week, the Testing Center will extend its hours during finals.

Testing hours upped for finals week rush

To avoid long lines during the final two weeks of the semester, the Testing Center will extend its hours between Saturday, April 13 and Wednesday, April 17.

Monday, which is the last day of classes, will be the busiest day of the semester at the Testing Center. If students do not have to take a test that day, it is strongly recommended that they do not. On Monday, the Testing Center will open at 7:30 a.m., and tests will be picked up at 9:45 p.m.

The Testing Center will be open on Saturday at 8 a.m. and tests will be picked up at 4:45 p.m.

The Testing Center will be closed on reading days, which are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Testing Center hours for finals week will be as follows:

- April 12, open 8 a.m. to 9:45 p.m.
- April 13, open 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.
- April 15 and 16, open 8 a.m. to 9:45 p.m.
- April 17, open 8 a.m. to 7:45 p.m.

School district adds program to fight drugs

By DEBBIE HOWELL
University Staff Writer

A tobacco and alcohol risk reduction program known as TARP, will become a part of Provo City School District's curriculum by next fall, said Elementary Specialist Karl Thompson.

The program has been a permanent part of high school and junior high school curriculum for nearly two years, but not all elementary school teachers have been oriented to the course yet, said Thompson.

"Instead of using the scare tactic . . . there is a heavy focus on dealing with peer pressure and self-concept," she said.

The program, written by the Utah State Division of Alcohol and Drugs, and Timp Mental Health, is currently being used in all 40 school districts throughout Utah, said Dr. Ted Terry, psychologist at Timp Mental Health.

Terry said the program helps children "become good at making healthy decisions." Many children are faced with the decision to use alcohol, tobacco or drugs by the age of 12, he said.

"Knowledge is important but not sufficient in changing behavior."

With the help of shape attitudes, "Terry said.

The program uses games, discussions and various activities to help children resist peer pressure and enhance their self-esteem.

Terry said the students have enjoyed the program, and administrators have commented that the program is a valuable part of student curriculum. Teachers have rated the program high in value and have enjoyed teaching it, he said.

The teachers are an important part of the program's success. Terry said teachers are encouraged to be models to the students of the concepts they present.

(teachers) go through three days of intensive workshop before they can teach the program. It causes them to look at their own lifestyle, he said.

According to Terry, teachers agreed that the workshops gave them practical experience and pointed out the impact they can have on the children.

It's important that children know that "being an adult is exciting," Terry said. If children look forward to becoming adults, it helps reduce the desire to use harmful substances.

Budget cuts impede child cancer therapy

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Hundreds of children who might otherwise be saved may die of cancer each year because federal budget cuts are slowing progress toward improved therapies, a leading cancer specialist said Wednesday.

"We're simply going to have to spend more money," said Dr. George Hammond, who heads the Children's Cancer Study Group, one of two multi-university programs which he said treat and study about 80 percent of American children with cancer. "I think it's going to mean lives."

Hammond said there has been a cut of about 20 percent over the past two years in National Cancer Institute funding to the Children's Cancer Study Group, the Pediatric Oncology Group — the other multi-university program — and university clinical research programs. He said that those cuts could cause the deaths of "much more than scores" of American children with cancer who might otherwise be saved even though researchers believe the annual death toll could be reduced to the hundreds, Hammond said. "I think that's the inescapable conclusion you come to talking about children who will get cancer in future years."

Bob Hadsell of the National Cancer Institute said that Hammond was "essentially correct" in estimating the overall reduction over two years at 20 percent.

But another NCI spokesman, Paul Nevel, said Hammond's contention that children will die because of the cuts "certainly can't be substantiated." The institute has felt the budget is adequate to fund all the high-priority programs . . ."

Semester's laws for parking remain same during finals

No changes will take place in parking regulations for faculty and staff lots during reading days and finals.

"There will be no exceptions, no moderation and no relaxation of rules during reading days and finals. All faculty and staff lots will be enforced as usual," said Michael Harroun, manager of traffic services.

On the Saturday during finals certain lots will be restricted to faculty only. "These lots will be posted with signs warning that parking without faculty and staff permits are required," he said.

During break, April 22 to 29, parking lots number 3, (east of the Harris Fine Arts Center), lot 4 (east of the Harvey Fletcher Building), lot 5 (west of the Technology Building), lot 9 (east of the Heber J. Grant Building) and lot 14 (south of the Tal-

Earnings drop after one-time tax write-off

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Power & Light Co. earnings dropped sharply in 1984, dipping from $123.8 million in 1983 to $94.6 million, company officials say.

In a letter contained in the utility's 1984 annual report, UP&L president blamed the earnings drop on a one-time after-tax write-off of $33.6 million.

Bentz says his intentions about office are serious

By MELANIE HARPER-SMITH
University Staff Writer

Nothing but serious intentions lie behind the man who "dares to go where no man has gone before," says Scott Bentz, who was elected ASBYU Women's Office vice president for the 1985-86 year.

A week before the election, Bentz decided to run for office. "At first some people thought it was a joke, and some still do," said Bentz, a junior from Santa Monica, Calif., majoring in social anthropology.

"I feel he began his campaign as a joke and later changed to a serious position," said Susan Peterson, administrative advisor for the Women's Office.

"It's a good idea. I think someone would run for the office on a lark," said Ida Smith, Alumni Activities director and former director of the Women's Research Institute, as well as a member of the Committee for Women's Concerns. "I am concerned to see anyone in the Women's Office trivialize women or their concerns in any way," she said.

Holiday posters pictured Bentz in front of a women's restroom door. It made people wonder just how serious he was about the office.

"Politics are politics," said Bentz. "I had to make my impression with my posters."

His campaign literature was serious, he said. "After I talked to people, they realized that I'm serious."

"The girl in my club (CDU) just laughed at the idea that I was running for Women's Office."

"The office doesn't need a woman to implement programs. It needs someone to seriously work for women's issues and to try to get student involvement," said Bentz. "I want to be an informed male on female issues."

Not everyone on campus thinks a man should hold the position. "I think the office should be held by a woman," said Peterson.

Women and men are raised differently with different values and priorities, said Stephanie Black, Women's Office vice president. "A man could run the programs, as long as we don't have coed dorms and locker rooms, we won't understand what women are talking about, feeling or needing," she said.

"To get around the communication problem, women will need to come in and give their input about their needs. We will have to hear from them what they want," Peterson said.

"It's a good idea on campus that a man is over the Women's Office. I wonder if BYU is ready for a man to run the Women's Office," she said. Black supported Peterson saying, "I don't think it's appropriate for BYU at this time."

Senior dance students to present final projects

In the BYU Dance Department, students not only have the chance to perform routines, but they also have the opportunity to choreograph and direct dance numbers as part of their education.

Three dance majors will present their senior projects today and Friday at 8 p.m. in the Dance Production Studio, 185 RB.

Brent Schneider, Deanna Ghorley and Denae Simmons have spent this semester directing works they have chosen to present as their final senior projects. Gladys Koch-Hovis will also present a dance number as part of her master's project.

Ghorley's dance, "Sovereign," deals with a woman's memory of the war—what she saw and how she felt. "It's not a happy dance, but it's not a depressing dance either."

To help her performers concentrate on the work, Ghorley reads stories at rehearsals that illustrate the effects of war. "They're not gory or depressing stories. They simply help to put the performers in the right frame of mind."

Some women leaders on campus are expressing doubts about Scott Bentz' ability to run the BYU Women's Office effectively. The new vice president maintains that he is sincere and has nothing but serious intentions.

Some think the vice president should be appointed and not elected so sex can be specified. "I don't think the office must be run by a woman or else the bylaws would say so," said Rob Miller, ASBYU president.

The Women's Office was created to give women a voice on the executive council. This coming year three other vice presidential positions will be occupied by female students, so the original objective of the Women's Office will still be met, Bentz said.

He said his basic goal for the Women's Office is to have both women and men involved. "Both sexes need to be aware of women's issues," Bentz said.

His emphasis is on women's programs but hopefully men will attend, he said.

Peterson is afraid Bentz will zero in on men and forget the needs of women. She wants more information on women's issues but, "that is just one face" of the office—the main focus is women.

The roles of women are changing rapidly and people need to be aware of the changes. This will help to create better communication between the sexes, Bentz said.

He also said people need to think more seriously about the importance of education for women and families.

Approximately 50 percent of freshman women do not finish school. "When women quit school they are committing economic suicide," said Bentz. "Ignorance is a terrible hindrance."

Bentz is interested in making a few changes in the office, like the Career Options Series and Women's Workshops programs that he feels should be kept. The speakers need to be upgraded, he said.

He said he would like the office to be involved with Women's Conference, and he would also like to make Preference tickets easier to buy. "I'd never stand outside for tickets, not even for sports. I think it's stupid," he said. "It's too bad that the girls have to stand outside when they have to stand outside. I want to change that."

The overall view of the office will change, he said, to involve both women and men in women's issues. "I want to build on what Stephanie Black has done."

Hundreds of radio stations plan simultaneous broadcast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A simultaneous broadcast Friday of the famine relief record "We Are the World" by hundreds of radio stations worldwide should help "bring to light the fact that there is a problem of hunger," a sponsor says.

The Good Friday broadcast, set for 10:50 a.m. EST, was inspired by stations in Georgia and Utah, and is being aided by some major networks.

The record, which was recorded by 46 U.S. states who donated their time, proceeds from sales of the record are going to USA for Africa, a non-profit organization founded by the performers to aid famine-stricken Africa.

The reason for the call for a global broadcast is to "get the point across that we really are the world," said Bob Wolfe of WROM-AM in Rome, Ga. He and Don Briscar of WKX-FM, in the same city, and Jim Mickelson, program director of KZAN in Ogden, Utah, are urging the simultaneous broadcast.

Stations across the United States, Canada and Europe, including East Germany, have agreed to participate, Wolfe and Briscar said.

Bob Castle, chief of the radio division at Armed Forces Network, which has 400 stations on land and sea around the world, said Tuesday the network won't broadcast the song, but "we have advised our stations that they can broadcast it if they choose." He said they all have copies of the record.

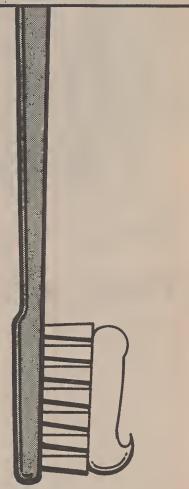

Voice of America also will play the record at 10:50 a.m., although at that time of day it is beaming only to the Mideast and southern Asia, said spokeswoman Regina Brown. She said VOA will play it at other times to various regions.

Trio of Finnish women to sing popular music

"How Many Sisters," a trio of young women from Finland, will be performing today at 11 a.m. in the auditorium of the Harman Continuing Education Building. The trio, which was originally scheduled to perform in the Memorial Lounge, will perform an hour-long program of popular American and Finnish music.

Paramount's 'King David' is 'valiant' Biblical effort

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"King David" is a valiant effort by Paramount Pictures to recapture the Biblical glory of Cecil B. DeMille, the studio's late, great moneymaker.

The effort is valiant but unavailing, possibly because of a change in public taste, possibly because of miscalculated casting.

The saga has been treated on the screen before. The last was directed by Bruce Beresford ("Breaker Morant," "Tender Mercies") and written by Andrew Birkin and James Costigan, tries to portray the entire sweep of David's life, from his beginnings as a shepherdboy to his death after a 40-year reign.

The tales familiar to every Sunday school pupil are there: the battle with Goliath; the fight for King Saul; the troubles with son Absalom; the shameful affair with Bathsheba. If anything, the filmmakers evidence a slavish adherence to scripture, sacrificing dramatic values that DeMille never overlooked.

Beresford's approach to "King David" appears to be aimed at interpreting the story realistically. That means the prophet Samuel assails King Saul's consideration for the captured Amalekite king, whom Samuel summarily beheads.

A film with the sweep of "King David" requires a bravura player such as Charlton Heston at its center. Richard Gere does not qualify. He is a decent, contemporary actor, and his unusual diction style doesn't lend itself to Biblical utterances.

He is also required to attempt strange scenes, such as David's dance in a loincloth through Jerusalem's streets after his victory over Saul. It is one of the most embarrassing scenes ever done by a major actor.

The production is handsomely mounted and chose to film the craggy mountains and desolate hills of Italy rather than in the desert. His actors are fresh faces to American audiences, and Edward Woodward is splendid as the impious Saul, teetering on the edge of madness. But casting English and Australian actors with an American star doesn't help the film's credibility.

The rating is PG-13 because of nudity, and parents should be warned that the graphic battle scenes could scare young children.

Richard Gere doesn't quite make it as David in Paramount Pictures' new movie, "King David," which is a sweeping but problem-filled saga of the life of the Biblical leader.

Billy Joel ecstatic over his marriage

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop star Billy Joel says his marriage to model Christie Brinkley has made him ecstatic.

"We've both been through a lot of personal tragedy, and we sort of met on that level, like people who have been through the mill," Joel said in an interview published in the April 8 issue of People magazine.

"We weren't starting out like teen-agers; we weren't even looking to fall in love. It was a zap when it happened. It was chemistry."

Joel recalled meeting Brinkley two years ago on the Caribbean island of St. Barts. He had just been divorced from his wife and former manager, Elizabeth Weber. Brinkley had recently split up with Olivier Chandon, race car driver and heir to the Moet & Chandon champagne fortune. Chandon was later killed when his race car plunged off a Florida track into a canal.

Now, after the wedding, friends say Joel is "walking into walls, he's so happy," and Joel agrees his new wife has made him ecstatic, and "totally thrilled" his family.

Students to perform scenes from a variety of musicals

Scenes from some of the most popular musicals ever performed on Broadway stages will be presented in the Pardoe Theater, HFAC, today and Friday at 8 p.m.

Musical theater students at BYU will highlight scenes from "Cats," "Evita," "Guys and Dolls," "Pippin," "10 Sixes," "Broadway" and "Sunday in the Park with George." Fully staged and choreographed scenes are planned for "Cats" and "Sunday in the Park with George."

The production is coordinated by Dr. Charles Whitman of the Drama Department, Pat DeBemah of the Dance Department and Randy Booth, musical director of the Young Ambassadors.

"What we have tried to do is make our students and audiences aware of the great musicals in many genres," Whitman said. "They are great in the sense of being internationally recognized pieces that are landmarks for one reason or another."

Performers include Alan Newbold, Scott Pickard, Tammy Willis, Mary Fanning, Ron Pickett, Janine Lindsay, Peggy Witbeck Matheson, Scott Carlyle, Fawn Gillette, Kelly Kohlert, Tom Kraschvill, Kelly Cuhnen, Nadine Mackinon, Maxwell Mount, Sarah Nelson, Marc Olivier, Alex Perez, Deborah Tripp, Chris Winn, Zerek Smith, Steven Gray, Brian Lives and guest Kim Jensen. "This should be a fun time for the audience to see some of the finest performances on stage in a long time," Whitman said.

Cougars clobber SUSC; prepare for WAC opener

By PAT CABULAGAN
Senior Reporter

The Cougars started their home season with a bang by belting SUSC twice in Wednesday's doubleheader.

According to BYU baseball coach Gary Pullins, the Cougars began playing well in Hawaii. "We believe in a baseball team in Hawaii. We started looking like a team, acting like a team and playing like a team."

In the second game of the doubleheader, the Cougars started freshman leftfielder Ron Masino on the mound. Masino pitched four strong innings for the Cougars giving up eight hits and striking out eight batters. But in the fourth inning with two outs and the score 8-8, Masino had his troubles going on three runs before being relieved by ace reliever Carl Kallipole.

Kallipole shut down SUSC the remainder of the game, without allowing any runs or hits and striking out two batters.

Cougar outfielder Jeff Brown started BYU's first because of a walk, third baseman Mark Inouye hit a perfect bunt-single to bring in Blaize Jensen, who got a base on a walk, to give the Cougars the lead for good, 2-1. Outfielder Dirk Thompson then hit a single to right field to bring in Dotson.

With Thompson on third and Stuart Adams on first because of a walk, third baseman Mark Inouye hit a perfect bunt-single to bring in Thompson. The other runs of the inning were scored when outfielder Gary Cooper hit a two-run triple followed by a two-run homer by Jeff Brown to end the inning at 8-1.

In the bottom of the fifth inning, the Cougars managed to score four more runs. The first of the runs came by way of the Thunderbirds miscues, while the second run came on a one-run single by Stuart Adams.

Brown was credited with the final two runs of the contest, when he belted a two-run homer to give the Cougars a 12-4 victory.

The first game of the doubleheader went much the same, as the Cougars ripped SUSC 15-4.

Led by junior pitcher Craig Seegmiller, the Cougars limited the Thunderbirds to only four runs. Seegmiller gave up on eight hits and notched six strikeouts in the win.

Cooper started out the Cougar scoring with a two-run homer in the first inning. In the third inning, Jeff Brown hit a three run homer, one of his three homers of the doubleheader, to make the score 5-0.

The Cougars rallied for eight more runs in the fourth inning. In the rally, Vareo hit a three-run double, while teammate Keith Harrison followed with a three-run round triple. Shortstop Gary Seeger capped off the rally with a homer of his own to finish off the scoring in inning five.

"We hit some balls today that weren't hard but ended up being base hits and home runs," said Pullins. "This was a good tuneup for our WAC opener (the Cougars will open their WAC season Friday against the Air Force Academy)."

Trump asks other owners to help pay Flutie's salary

NEW YORK (AP) — United States Football League owners will be confronted at their next meeting with another one of those off-field squabbles they seem to face so often — a request that they help Donald Trump and the New Jersey Generals pay Doug Flutie's multi-million-dollar salary.

USFL Commissioner Harry Usher confirmed Tuesday that he had received from Trump and disbursed to the league's other teams a letter asking that they share the burden of Flutie's $8.3-million, six-year contract. Trump's reasoning, Usher said, was that other owners had urged him to go all-out to sign the Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback from Boston College for the good of the league.

Usher declined to give his own position on the letter.

But he said Flutie has helped increase attendance despite a hot-and-cold start in which he ranks 10th among the 14 starting USFL quarterbacks.

Flutie has pulled out two games for the 3-3 Generals in the fourth quarter, but threw four interceptions last week and has completed only 43 percent of his passes.

Sutton named as new coach of Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Eddie Sutton says he "would have crawled all the way to Lexington" for a shot at being University of Kentucky men's basketball coach. Saturday, Sutton jumped.

Sutton, who two weeks ago told the Arkansas Legislature he wanted to retire with the Razorbacks, took charge Tuesday of Kentucky's Wildcats.

Sutton, 49, boosted Arkansas from the basement to the top of the Southwest Conference since 1975, capping his career with a string of 200 victories and trips to the NCAA Tournament.

In the bottom of the fifth inning, the Cougars managed to score four more runs. The first of the runs came by way of the Thunderbirds miscues, while the second run came on a one-run single by Stuart Adams.

Brown was credited with the final two runs of the contest, when he belted a two-run homer to give the Cougars a 12-4 victory.

Top gymnasts ready for meet

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The University of Utah leads a field of 10 teams and 10 all-around competitors that have qualified for the 1985 NCAA Division I Women's Gymnastics Championship, which will be held April 12-13 on the Uttes' home floor in Salt Lake City.

Pro golf tourney begins today: Zoeller to play

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller's appearance in the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open this week is, among other things, part of an experiment.

"I'm in the middle of a string of five consecutive tournaments," the current U.S. Open champion said before a practice round for the tournament that begins today.

Zoeller, who underwent major back surgery last fall, confirmed his comeback with a dramatic victory last month in the Bay Hill Classic.

The back is fine, and he now plays without pain. But Zoeller said he still has problems late in the day, "when I start getting tired."

The 35-year-old Zoeller usually plays in Greensboro — the last stop before next week's Masters — when many of the game's leading performers take the week off to make an early start on preparations at Augusta, Ga.

Among his chief competitors in the 144-man field that is chasing a $72,000 first prize are current Greensboro titleholder Andy Bean, Lanny Watkins, Craig Stadler, Ray Floyd and Ben Crenshaw, who next week will defend his Masters crown.

The team and all-around competition will be conducted on April 12, and the top eight gymnasts in each event will compete for individual titles in floor exercise, balance beam, uneven bars and vault on April 13.

Utah is the three-time defending national champion, having won all of the previous championships sponsored by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The ten teams, in order of their seeding, are Utah, Arizona State, Florida, Alabama, Cal State-Fullerton, Ohio State, Oregon State, Penn State, Georgia and Oklahoma.

Miller to bail out Jazz

Car dealer agrees to buy half of Utah squad

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Subject to a number of contingencies, Salt Lake auto dealer Larry Miller has agreed to buy half the Utah Jazz for a sum Miller described only as "in excess of $6 million."

Meanwhile, the Jazz clinched a berth in the NBA playoffs Tuesday night when Phoenix beat visiting Seattle 119-109. Now, neither the 30-46 Sonics nor 30-45 Kansas City can pass Utah, 37-39, in the regular-season standings.

Miller and Jazz owner Sam Battistone signed the non-binding letter of intent Tuesday.

Officials of the National Basketball Association club had announced last summer that Triad America, owned by the Almoggi family of Saudi Arabia, had purchased half the Jazz. But it was disclosed recently that Triad had balked at the NBA's requirement of an audit.

Since then club officials have said they have to find new money or sell the franchise to out-of-state interests.

Tuesday's agreement "commits us to buying half the Jazz for a certain sum of money, subject to I think it's total of about 11 contingencies," Miller said.

The major contingency on his side, he said, was putting together a financing package among four financial institutions.

"The two that I've been able to spend a lot of time with — I think a cumulative total, of Friday, yesterday (Tuesday) and today (Wednesday) of probably four hours with Moore Financial and maybe six hours with people from American Savings. Those responses have been very favorable," Miller said.

He did not name the other two potential lenders, but said he had had preliminary discussions over the phone with one and "the other has begun review of what I would call the standard processes of the financial agreement."

Other contingencies named include renegotiating the Jazz's lease with the Salt Palace, approval by N.B.A. owners and directors of Battistone's Stratamerica and a settlement with Triad, which has been paying the Jazz's monthly debt interest since December.

Miller said Battistone still has the option to sell to some other party, and, "my fear is that the one outside buyer who is actively pursuing this, that I'm aware of . . . will just call one day and drop the money on him."

Jazz President David Checkett has mentioned interest by a group wanting to move the club to Orange County, Calif., but Miller said it was another California group he was concerned about. He would not identify the prospective city.

Utah Jazz guard John Stockton drives around a Celtic opponent during a home game at the Salt Palace this season. The Jazz have earned a partial reprieve in their financial woes thanks to Salt Lake businessman Larry H. Miller.

NCAA makes rule changes; shot clock in for 1986 season

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Shoot it or lose it, the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee decided.

The panel's decision Tuesday means Monday night's championship game — won by Villanova, master of the delay game — will be the last without the 45-second shot clock. The clock — forcing teams to shoot or forfeit the ball within 45 seconds of taking possession — will stay on the whole game all season long.

Twenty-five conferences — 19 of them Division I — experimented with the clock this season, but it was not used in the NCAA Tournaments.

During a wrap-up meeting after the Final Four in Lexington, the Rules Committee also stiffened penalties for intentional fouls, banned printed matter on T-shirts and made it a rule that the score is final once a referee leaves the floor after a game.

All rules changes must be approved by at least eight of the 12 committee members. Edward F. Stein, secretary-editor of the committee, would say only that the Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller, a longtime opponent of the shot clock, remained in the minority. He called the change "the first step to stereotyping the game," and said "upsets are going to disappear."

"The rich are going to get richer and the poor are going to get poorer," he said. "You will see more teams like UCLA, Cornell State or Villanova go through and win a national championship with a clock, and that's too bad."

vote on the clock "was not close."

'Snappy' pair
are specialists
on deep snaps

CHICAGO (AP) — The brothers Hilgenberg are among the snappy guys, at least when playing football.

Jay plays for the Chicago Bears and Joel for the New Orleans Saints. Both are offensive linemen and both are specialists at snapping the ball, getting on pants and place-kicks.

Jay also holds down a regular job as center for the Bears and Joel is a backup guard for the Saints. Both played football at the University of Illinois.

"My father told us

football teams always need a guy who can make the long snap," Jay said.

$10 in the hand is worth 100 pats on the back.

The trouble with most summer sales jobs is that all the hard work in the world won't earn you a dime if you don't sell anything. And all the back-patting and encouragement in the world won't fill your empty wallet.

At Eagle Marketing, we put our money where our promises are. We pay our reps $10 for every sales appointment they make and keep. Whether they sell anything or not. So no appointment is a wasted effort. And hard work gets rewarded.

Of course, $10 per appointment is only the minimum you can earn this summer with Eagle. Most of our reps earn $4,000-$7,000 in just 17 weeks. And many earn much more than that.

For an excellent summer job that offers high earning potential, a great learning experience, plus our unique $10 guarantee, talk to an Eagle representative. Or call Richard Johnson at 225-9000.

Eagle is soaring. What about you?

I Live on Campus

Rankly, living on campus my freshman year was a frustrating experience, so I moved off for a while. Then I learned I could come back into an area designated for students who wanted a quiet living environment that was more suited to study. In the five years I've been here, I have seen a tremendous improvement in the food, in the accommodations, and in the people. We must find a way to tell the more mature, serious students that there is a place for them in the on-campus living experience."

Neca Allgood is a Senior from Camarillo, California, who is graduating this spring with University honors in Microbiology. She has recently been awarded a coveted National Science Foundation grant that will provide her with tuition, books, and all expenses for three years of graduate study at the university of her choice.

April offers last chance for hunters and anglers to buy at 1984 prices

Higher license, permit fees go in effect April 29

By MARK BRADLEY
University Staff Writer

Inflated prices are coming soon on fishing licenses and hunting permits as the Utah Department of Wildlife Resources prepares for another season.

"Higher prices will go into effect on April 29 for the combination license, fishing licenses and hunting permits," said Laurie Seamons, department secretary.

"All permits and licenses are being sold this month at last year's prices. April 28th will be the last day to buy them at the lower price," said Seamons.

The current price for a combination license is $23. This permit entitles the owner to hunt big game and fish with the purchase of a trout stamp that costs $3.30, she said.

The price of the combination license will go up to $35, and the buyer will not need to buy the trout stamp with the license.

The price of an adult fishing license will also be raised. The current fee for the license is $10.50 plus the $3.30 fee for the trout stamp, Seamons said. The new price will be a flat fee of $18.

One change taking place this year is the elimination of the 10-day fishing license, she said. The price of the disabled hunting license will remain the same, and the game license will go up to $15, which is up from the present $10 fee.

In order for people to hunt ducks or other waterfowl, they must obtain a waterfowl stamp from any post office, Seamons said. It is not known yet whether or not the price of the stamp will increase from the $7.50 fee paid by hunters last year.

The Wildlife Resources fish and game board will meet in early June to determine specific dates and regulations for this year's hunting and fishing season, she said.

The hunting proclamation for 1985 will be written at that time and will be available at sporting goods stores by early July, she said.

The fishing season is now year-round in Utah but some restrictions do apply until May, Seamons said. The fishing proclamation is available now and is helpful in explaining any restrictions for Utah fishermen.

Hunting to decrease with human increase

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah deer and elk hunters may have fewer chances to bag their quarry as increasing human population competes with animals for prime feeding grounds, a state game biologist says.

"It's a double-edged sword," said Grant Jense, Utah Division of Wildlife Resources big game coordinator. "As the population increases, the demand for the resources increases. More people will want recreational opportunities, but at the same time more people will want industry and housing."

Currently, Utahns enjoy open hunting during the fall for deer and elk. But that could change as population increases place greater demands on land used for housing, business and industrial development, he said.

"As the population increases, the habitat decreases," Jense said. "There's going to be more restrictions on hunters' opportunities — fewer days to hunt, or hunters won't be very often able to hunt."

Utah's deer herd is now about half what the habitat can sustain, but Jense said that is because animals have suffered through several harsh winters.

As winters moderate, Jense said, the current 350,000-population deer herd will grow to 650,000, considered the optimum number that can live in the state's winter range.

One way the herd is being controlled is through a bucks-only season, which began statewide in 1975. Jense said the program has helped build the herd to the point that a record 77,295 bucks were bagged in the 1983 hunt.

In that year nearly 96,000 deer were killed in the rut, and most seasons archery and muzzleloader seasons are in special either-sex hunts designed to relieve pressure of deer feeding on residential shrubs or in agricultural areas.

Jense said special areas established in the past only to solve a specific conflict between humans and the animals. In most cases, he said, the state's 62 management areas have more habitat than animals are using.

However, Utah's 1.6-million population is projected to jump to more than 2.2 million in the year 2000 and to nearly 2.7 million in 2010, said an official with the state Office of Planning and Budget.

One way the department keeps humans from encroaching on deer and elk range is to buy land before it is converted to residential or commercial use.

In 1965 the division decided it needed 600,000 acres of key private winter range, a figure that has been pared to 975,000 acres since then. In fact, in the two decades the state has acquired about half the land it needs.

"It's a very costly program and we don't have sufficient funding," he said. "Also, the development price has made the price of the land soar."

The same land that sold for less than $25 an acre now sells for $400 an acre or more.

Remember the real reason for Easter this year

Each year the Easter bunny, colored plastic grass, baskets filled with candy and Easter egg hunts seem to dominate a holiday that perhaps should be celebrated more with a spiritual remembrance of a significant sacrifice.

During this time of the year, the whole Christian world unites to observe the most far-reaching event in history: the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The rising of Christ from the tomb where he had lain for three days secured the priceless gift of everlasting life for everyone. That gift affects every soul — living and dead.

Traditionally, Easter is celebrated on Sunday and most church services are dedicated to the remembrance of the resurrection. Religious sermons emphasize spiritual awareness — but after services are over, people go home to their Easter baskets filled with candy.

Easter takes place in the spring because the first Easter was the springtime of all history. It is a reminder of new life and hope.

But sometimes people forget what the holiday was originally for because its spiritual meaning is overshadowed by worldly elements such as eggs, candy and bunnies. The same thing happens at Christmas time. People tend to think of Santa Claus before they remember the birth of the Savior of the world.

However, these superficial elements can bring about some good. Inanimate objects do gain too much attention, but they portray the basic spirit of the original meaning of the holiday.

The Easter bunny delivers goodies to others in a spirit of giving — and he doesn't receive any personal rewards. And eggs are a sign of new life or birth, which is what Easter is all about. Through imaginary or temporal objects, some people might see the true value of the occasion. These things also provide a way for non-religious people to enjoy the event.

For those true Christians who rejoice in Christ's gift, however, spiritual thoughts will rise above those of a temporal nature. Christ will be thought of first — and the Easter bunny will be pushed into the background.

General Conference time to renew spirit

The end of another BYU semester is rapidly approaching. Only three days of classes remain; final exams begin in eight days. As time grows shorter, most students will be concentrating their energies on their studies more than at any other time in the semester.

In addition to exams and all-night study sessions, the end of the semester also brings General Conference. As they review their calculus and chemistry notes, students should also reflect on what President David O. McKay once said about the purpose of BYU:

"BYU is primarily a religious institution. It was established for the sole purpose of associating with the facts of science, art, literature and philosophy the truths of the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

At BYU, spiritual learning and enlightenment has been given an emphasis equal in weight to secular knowledge and instruction. Even during the tense, hectic days before finals, students should not neglect the religious aspect of their education.

The number of general authorities that speak in conference, the quality and diversity of their addresses, and the accessibility of all sessions of the conference provide an excellent opportunity for students to further their spiritual education.

Along with the forums and devotionals, Dialogue and Donuts, symposiums, Flea Market of Ideas, special lectures and guest speakers, General Conference is an event that offers students the chance to enrich their education in the wholistic sense that is intended at BYU.

'Trust' missing quality in arms negotiations

Much has been said about the trusting nature of the residents of Utah, a lot of it in complimentary tones, because of the reputation Utah has earned as the fraud capital of the country.

However, the same trusting nature that has made Utahns the victims of many swindlers may show the way to end the spiraling nuclear arms race. A far-fetched conjecture yes, but a pleasant thought all the same.

At the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty held on campus, Capt. James Bush, associate director of the Center for Defense Information, suggested that all future talks with the Soviets concerning nuclear arms will fail, because "Americans do not trust the Soviets to be a legitimate negotiating partner. We expect them to cheat. Yet the Soviets are more likely to uphold their end of the bargain than we are, Bush said.

Under the present system of arms negotiation, the odds are excellent that rather than meeting to discuss the possibility of a nuclear freeze, the Soviet negotiators will be greeted with accusations; not the much more pleasant task of discussing what both sides could agree to. Of course, it needs to be recognized that trust, or the lack thereof, is not the only problem facing the negotiators at the talks in Geneva.

According to Bush, of the most recently negotiated arms treaties with the Soviets, there were unratified by Congress because they failed verification. In other words, because Americans don't trust the Soviets to be able to count their missiles for themselves, the opportunity to at least slow the production of nuclear weapons has been lost.

"And because the Americans don't trust the Soviets, we are never going to negotiate any significant treaty," Bush said. The only solution Bush can see is the development of the idea that the Soviets are legitimate negotiators and are likely to abide by a treaty.

So, Americans will have to trust them and agree to a treaty. Now is the time for emphasizing the ways Soviets and Americans work together, in agriculture and space exploration.

But more is needed. Everyone knows the statistics. Between the two superpowers and their stockpiles of nuclear weapons, the world could be completely destroyed. According to one report, the deployment of as little as 1 percent of this stockpile could be enough to set off a nuclear war. If the Soviets really had the sort of annihilating power that they claim, it would result in the end of life on the earth.

Now is the time to reach an agreement and learn to get along better for the preservation of the earth itself. Perhaps Americans could take some lessons in trust and getting along with people from the Utahns who may be susceptible to frauds, but determined to find enough people worth trusting to keep them believing in the good of humanity. Can the Soviets be so different?

and attitude towards the Soviet Union is replaced by something more objective, Soviet-American relations will never improve. I hope that in the future we can bring to BYU quieted speech whose views are not biased by a totally "hardliner" outlook on the Soviet Union.

We may not like what these people (such as George Kennan and Hedrick Smith) have to say — but neither do we want to be like the blind man who touched the elephant's ear and then assumed he knew the whole animal.

One good deed ...

Editor:
One evening while walking on campus with my friend, we had the misfortune to run across a string of firecrackers going off in front of the Cannon Center at about midnight.

I proceeded to put them out. A security man approached me and asked for my ID. Although there were eight people stating that I wasn't the perpetrator of this bad-acting, he believed that I was closest and therefore the guilty.

No one wants the government to help me, but if I had done something stupid a few years ago, I would be closer!

Crossword puzzles

Editor:
It has come to our attention that there are many bored students, in many boring classes on this campus. So with this in mind, we have come up with a great idea to solve this great dilemma of boredom.

We would like to suggest to you, The Universe, that you print a crossword puzzle or something of that nature that students can save for boring classes.

This will also solve other problems — sleeping in class, getting up and walking out during the boring lecture, and other wicked and impure habits.

Diversify opinion

Editor:
Malcolm Toon, a former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, recently came to BYU. I was one of those who went to hear his talk. I shuddered a couple of times as Ambassador Toon graphically described to us the monstrosity that is the Soviet Union — a system that is "ruthless, evil, brutal, and obsessed with conquering the world."

There is some truth to this statement, but it is only one side presented to us over and over again (as evidenced by other talks on the Soviet Union given by experts invited to BYU, for example, Arkady Shevchenko and Alexander Ginzburg).

I do not intend to make light of the injustices that are committed by the Soviet government, neither do I propose that we sit in contented naivete of the present political realities of the world. My concern is that we never get a fairer picture of the Soviet Union and its people from those who are invited here to speak.
